

Street Smart Truck Company Operations, Tactics, Tips & Tricks

NYSAFC Fall 2008 Seminar Series

On every fireground there are numerous truck company tasks that must be accomplished for a successful firefight. These range from forcible entry, searching, laddering, ventilating, to overhauling. Often, due to limited manpower and resources, the truck company firefighter must adapt to the conditions and overcome challenges to handle many of the situations that arise. Many of us refer to them as “tricks of the trade,” but are they really just “tricks?” This lecture will outline numerous street smart truck company operations, tactics, and tips that will increase your overall skill level, improve your safety, help enhance your overall tactical performance, and save you time and energy while performing truck company operations on today’s fireground and emergency scenes.

Lt. Michael Ciampo, FDNY

Michael Ciampo is a lieutenant with the Fire Department City of New York (FDNY) where he has served for 18 years. He was previously a firefighter with the District of Columbia Fire Department for five years. Prior to his career experience, Ciampo joined the Wyckoff (NJ) Volunteer Fire Department in 1979 and was a fourth generation volunteer firefighter. He has a bachelor’s degree in fire science from John Jay College of Criminal Justice. Ciampo is the lead instructor for FDIC’s Hands-On Training portable ladders class and is a frequent lecturer on truck company operations at FDIC. He is a contributing editor and editorial advisor for Fire Engineering and authored the portable ladder chapter in the soon to be released textbook Firefighter 1 & 2. A certified New York state fire instructor, Ciampo is also a NYSAFC Hands-On Training Program instructor in truck company operations and live burn evolutions. He has also instructed at the Firehouse Expo and numerous other fire service tradeshow across the country.
